The Phoenix and the Carpet

The Phoenix and the Carpet by E. Nesbit. Published by Puffin. Price: £1.50.

Not many children are lucky enough to have a carpet in their room that can take them anywhere through time and space. Robert, Jane, Cyril and Anthea are not only lucky enough to have such a carpet – but also a golden, magical bird to go with them on their funny, exciting or sometimes, just plain scary, adventures. This story was written a long time ago. The four children are probably now very old people – but their story is as exciting as that moment when they threw a golden egg into a fire. . . and a flame-coloured bird flew out!

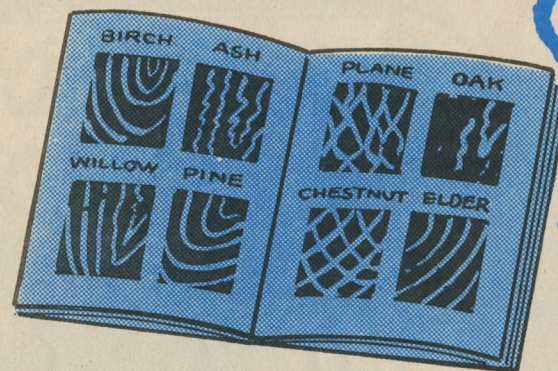

Cut out and collect.

Here's how the Get-Along Gang RUB ALONG together!

TREE RUBBING

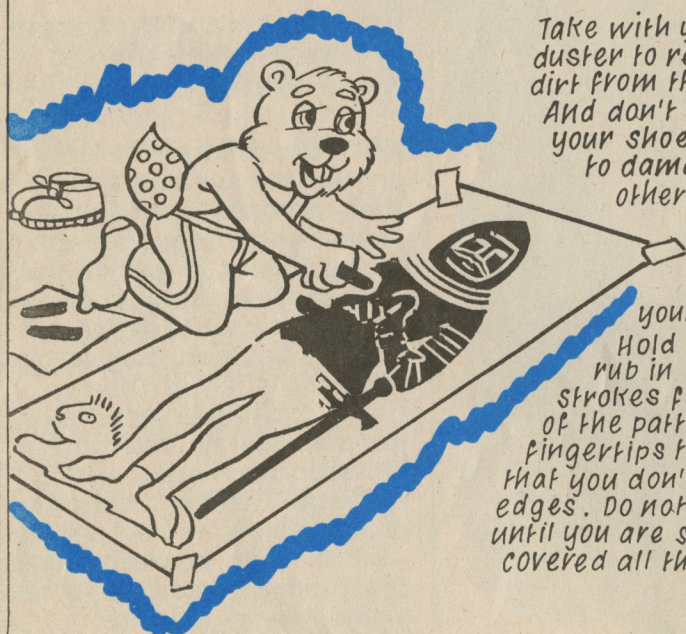

This hobby gets you out into the open, in the park or the woods. Take along some sheets of thin, white paper (Kitchen shelf paper?) and black wax crayon or cobbler's heelball. Take your paper to the trunk of the tree and take a rubbing of its pattern.

When you get home you can trim the papers and mount them in a scrapbook with the name of the tree, date and place where you rubbed them.

BRASS RUBBING

Next time you visit an old church, look around to see if there are any monumental brasses there, usually set into the floor. Knights in armour or their ladies - You can take rubbings of these. But first you must get permission!

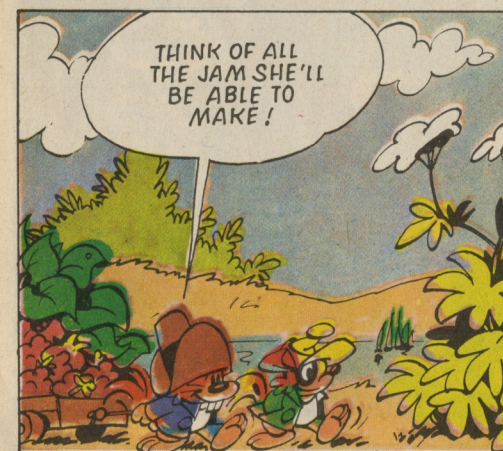

Take with you a soft duster to remove any dirt from the brasses. And don't forget to take your shoes off so as not to damage any other brasses if there are any nearby. Then tape (or weight) your paper down. Hold it steady and rub in firm even strokes feel the edges of the pattern with your fingertips to make sure that you don't go over the edges. Do not lift the paper until you are sure you've covered all the figure.
